MASKED ROBBER.

Crime Committed at Kakaako
in the Midnight Hours.

An Unknown Villain Intimidates a
Woman with a Pistol and Steals
Her Husband's Savings.

E. L. Moore, a sergeant in the National Guards, was robbed of $325 last night by an unknown villain. Moore and his wife left their house, opposite the old immigration depot, Kakaako, in the early part of the evening for a walk. They returned to the house about 7:30 o'clock. Half an hour later the couple took supper, as the husband had to go on duty at the barracks. Shortly after Moore had left Mrs. Moore went to bed with her two children.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock Mrs. Moore was disturbed by a rumbling noise as of some one rolling on the floor. She looked out and saw a man fumbling with a pistol, being apparently unaccustomed with the weapon. He was trying to insert a cartridge. Mrs. Moore was so frightened that she was unable to scream. The intruder wore a white mask, a slouch hat, black overcoat and black trousers. Seeing that the woman made no noise the man slipped out the back door and left. The pistol and overcoat were found on the floor down stairs.

When Mrs. Moore made an examination of the place she found some of the household goods tossed about. She examined underneath the mattress and found that the marauder had relieved them of $325. Mrs. Moore had put the money between two mattresses on her bed.

Mr and Mrs. Moore suspect that the man got into the house while they were absent in the early part of the evening. He was probably surprised on their return and sneaked under the bed. While in the act of so doing his contact with the bedding shook the bag of money and made it rattle. The man evidently did not have a knife, as a razor belonging to Mr. Moore was found under the bed. It had been used in cutting through the nether mattress. The razor was taken from an adjoining room.

Officer Kaapa has the case in hand and it is thought it will be only a matter of time when the burglar will be arrested, as there are suspicions as to his identity. The officer believes the man to be a professional burglar, but he does not understand the clumsy handling of the pistol.

WORK OF LOCAL ARTISANS.

Splendid Piece of Cabinet-making by Hopp & Co.

At the store of Hopp & Co. may be seen one of the handsomest pieces of furniture ever turned out by a local cabinet-making house. It is a sideboard made entirely of koa, and stands ten feet by seven feet. This fine piece of furniture was designed by Hopp & Co. It is entirely made by hand, no machine work being employed, and not a single nail used. The panels are beautifully carved. The carving was done by Jas. Engstrom. There are two plate glass mirrors on each side at the top, with one large one in the centre. The whole is finely polished. The firm is justifiably proud of the work.

The sideboard was made to the order of A. Robinson, of Makaweli, Kauai. The cost of the article is $500. It will be sent to its owner next week. This creditable product of local handicraft is well worth inspection by the public.

If you are out of Bill Heads, Letter Heads, etc., we can supply them.
